WALLS WEEPS ALL NIGHT A DECISION

BULLETIN

Cannes, France, Dec. 10 (INS)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson learned of King Edward's decision to abdicate last night and, it was learned today, spent the entire evening weeping and nervously pacing the floor.

Cannes, France, Dec. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson "has nothing to say" concerning the abdication of King Edward, her spokesman, Lord Brownlow, declared today.

She asserted through another intermediary, Herman Rogers, that there is not "the remotest possibility" that Edward will join her at Loui Viei Villa here "now or later."

It was Rogers, a New Yorker, who offered her the use of the villa after she left London.

Lord Brownlow said Edward's American friend had been informed of his abdication before word of it was brought to the villa by newspapermen.

"There is no statement and there will be no statement," he said, visibly shaken with emotion. Lord Brownlow was a gentleman-in-waiting to the King.

Twilight shadows were just beginning to fall from range and pine trees along the lane leading to the villa when newspapermen received word that the British monarch was leaving his throne.

Two days in a nearby house hawled disconsolately. Before the abdication was officially announced in London, Rogers declared for Mrs. Simpson:

"Not only is the King not coming to the villa, but he is not coming to the Riviera."

"What his definite plans are we do not know but we do know that much."

SHE TELEPHONES AGAIN

"There are no changes so far as Mrs. Simpson's plans are concerned. She plans to stay here at least until after Christmas."

Rogers asserted he was unable to say whether Mrs. Simpson had talked "directly" to the King during the London, Dec. 10 (INS)—The full text of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's statement in the House of Commons follows:

"I have now to move that His Majesty's most gracious message be now considered."

"No more grave message was ever received by Parliament, no more difficult and, I might say, repugnant, task has ever been imposed upon a prime minister (cheers)."

"I will now ask the House, which I know will not be without sympathy for me now (cheers) to remember that this last week I have had little time in which to compose a speech for delivery today."

"And so I must tell what I have to tell truthfully, sincerely, plainly, with no attempt to dress it up; and I shall have little or nothing to say in the way of comment or criticism, of praise or of blame."

"Then my best course today, and the one that the House would desire, is to tell them so far as I can what has passed between His Majesty and myself, and what has led up to the present situation."

"I might say at the start that His Majesty as Prince of Wales honored me for many years with a friendship which I value; and I know he would agree with me in saying to you that it was not only friendship, but between man and man a friendship of perfection."

"I would like to tell the House that when we said goodbye Tuesday night at Fort Belvedere, we both knew it and said to each other that that friendship, so far from being impaired by the discussions of this last

'MR. DAVID WINDSOR' READY FOR EXILE

BULLETIN

London, Dec. 10 (AP)—The British House of Commons reconvened tonight to consider legislation which would make King Edward's abdication effective.

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, Dec. 10 (INS)—Convinced proper exercise of his kingly duties would be possible only if his love for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson were crowned by marriage, King Edward today renounced throne and empire and handed the sceptre of majesty to his brother, the Duke of York.

His instrument of abdication, frankly admitting that without the Baltimore beauty by his side he could not efficiently or satisfactorily reign as King, was read to a packed House of Commons hushed into awed silence.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin moved immediate consideration of the sovereign's last message, but after hearing the Premier's declaration that followed conclusion of the shortest reign in almost five centuries of England's history, the House adjourned until 6 p. m. (1 p. m. E. S. T.)

At that time the House will in all probability accept the instrument of abdication as written, sealed and signed.

Sometime tonight, a formal abdication

STOCKS FIRM

New York, Dec. 10 (INS)—The stock market displayed a firm tone today, with the price index higher as the British crisis reached its climax with the abdication of King Edward and succession of the Duke of York to the throne.

The London market gave a fore-runner of this by pointing upward after yesterday's weakness.

Stocks and bonds gave the best performance here, gains running to 1/2 a share and more. Utility shares and farm equipments were better, and metals recovered early losses. Trading was moderate to active.

THE WEATHER

Occasional rain today and slight change in temperature; temperature near 10 degrees tonight and Friday; moderate easterly winds.

BULLETINS

Dunkirk, France, Dec. 10 (AP)—The chief of special police of the port of Dunkirk said tonight he had received orders to station extra guards at the waterfront in preparation for the possible arrival of King Edward.

London, Dec. 10 (INS)—The Press Association stated this evening Edward would leave the country immediately after signing the Bill providing for his abdication, probably tomorrow night.

London, Dec. 10 (INS)—It was reported tonight King Edward might go to the castle of Prince Eric of Denmark, near Copenhagen, when he leaves England. Prince Eric himself renounced claims to the throne of Denmark.

London, Dec. 10 (INS)—The Duke of York, future King of England, drove to Fort Belvedere tonight to dine with King Edward.

Personal Loss Suffered By British, Says Attlee

London, Dec. 10 (AP)—When the Commons convened this evening, Clement R. Attlee, opposition leader, was cheered loudly as he arose to address the members.

"This occasion does not call for long and eloquent speeches," Attlee said.

"My words will be few and simple. We have all heard with profound concern the message from the King."

"The King has decided he can no longer continue on the throne. The whole country will receive the news with the deepest sorrow and his supporters in these hours and throughout the British dominions beyond the seas will feel a sense of personal loss."

"I am certain that throughout these anxious days he has had the sympathy of all in this country but throughout the commonwealth and the empire have seen in him not a remote ruler—many of them have been personally acquainted with him and he has visited places where many of them live."

KING'S HEART TO DO WITH AS HE WILLS—G. B. SHAW

Ministers Have No Right To Dictate to Ruler on Love, Says Playwright

London, Dec. 10 (U.S.)—In the following exclusive interview obtained from the world-famous philosopher-playwright just before news of King Edward's abdication became public, George Bernard Shaw ably pleaded today for Edward's right to marry the woman of his choice and remain King.

The text of the interview follows:

Q.—In your opinion do you consider that the King of England should be free to marry the woman of his choice, or should he be at the head of the state be compelled to marry in accordance with the wishes of his ministers?

A.—The King of England is as free to marry the woman of his choice as I was when I was a bachelor.

Q.—But surely he cannot act except on the advice of his ministers.

A.—Nonsense! Suppose they give him medical advice. Suppose they advise him to die by his hand, or change the color of his hair, or have his favorite dog shot. He will reply that he is sorry that their tactics and his differ but that they are not constitutional advisers and their advice therefore is not constitutional advice.

Personal Matter

Limits in the power and personal liberty of a constitutional monarch are not the personal prerogatives of his ministers. He may not legislate except by the advice of his ministers. He may not declare war without their advice. He may not have his ministers heads cut off.

Q.—But surely his choice of a wife is not the same as his being as his choice of a necktie. It is a matter of public concern.

A.—Yes. But it is also a matter of most delicate personal concern. The ministers cannot advise the King in his choice of a bride, unless the lady be closely ineligible or the alliance politically mischievous.

Q.—Exactly. But is not Mrs. Simpson ineligible?

A.—On the contrary. The King could not have made a happier choice. Of all the political alliances open to the king by marriage by far the most desirable and patriotic is an American marriage. In the eighteenth century the most eligible royal consorts politically were members of reigning European royal families.

Political Choice

In the nineteenth century Queen Victoria's marriage to Prince Albert effected an Anglo-German entente which lasted until the end of the century.

But today there are no royal houses of any consequence left in Europe. The only foreign relations of real importance are those with republican powers and among these the most stable and important and the least

George Bernard Shaw had done earlier.

First, Wells reminds the public that Mrs. Simpson divorced her first husband, that she did not divorce her, which makes a difference.

Second, England's "antiquated political system" is the King's choice may have begun as a personal choice, but it happens, luckily, to be also a state political choice.

Q.—But do you mean that Mrs. Simpson should be crowned in Westminster Abbey as Queen of England?

A.—Of course I do if the King marries her before his coronation. And how could she coronate anything less without accepting an insult to her country?

Bad Reasoning

She is bound to insist on every inch of dignity and ceremony that would be attached to a marriage with a princess of oldest royal blood. How could the King possibly ask her to forego her rights and those of her children as if a citizen of the United States belonged to an inferior species?

Q.—You take away my breath Mr. Shaw.

A.—That's because you have not been taught how to breathe the air of the twentieth century. You breathe like George the Third.

Q.—But if the cabinet in spite of all you say advises the King not to marry Mrs. Simpson?

A.—If so the cabinet must give a constitutional reason for its objection to her.

Now the sole reason given so far is that Mrs. Simpson is an American. It is impossible nowadays for responsible ministers to give such a reason.

It is not a constitutional reason. There is no constitutional objection to Mrs. Simpson; and there is every possible diplomatic argument in her favor.

The cabinet will have to face that fact. They are making difficulties that do not really exist. Good morning.

able will become King, and his brother's little girl, Princess Elizabeth, would eventually be the Queen. This is only 10 years old, but already England discusses an appropriate coronation, or husband for her. Little Elizabeth here will marry not apply.

'King's Ship' Flight Proves False Alarm

While some persons still were writing that the plane might have been the King's, it returned and proved to be a private ship.

Girl Killed, 9 Hurt In Tenement Fire

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—An 18-year-old girl perished and nine persons were injured today when fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, swept through a five-story Bronx tenement building where firemen had extinguished two other fires during the night.

Voltaire said the English people were like English beer, fresh but the top, excellent in the middle, drops at the bottom.

Should it be necessary to skim off some of the froth, the Simpson-Edward incident might provide a skimmer.

London hopes the Simpson-Edward crisis will benefit the British and American economies.

LITTLE Girl May Be QUEEN

ELIZABETH IDOL OF BRITAIN

London, Dec. 10 (AP)—Fair-haired little Princess Elizabeth perhaps cared more today for her pet pony and dog named "Yorky" than for the turn of events that projected her more into the limelight.

With her mother, the Duchess of York, and her little sister, Princess Margaret Rose, Elizabeth continued making short trips from her "Dorset" home about London and to Windsor, unaware of the meaning of the excitement about her.

Stalled at birth as a possible second "Queen Beas" by Britons who want to remember the proud history of the empire under the first Queen Elizabeth, the princess immediately became a luminous figure.

Today she was thrust more keenly into the spotlight that beat for many years around her "Uncle David" when he was Prince of Wales. Her popularity as a baby was second only to the acclaim that greeted her uncle—the uncle who was her father's predecessor.

Reared to Rule

The Princess' regal manner and qualities endeared her to all subjects of the crown. The death of King George V, her grandfather, placing her third in the line of succession, served to accentuate the public interest over her welfare.

For the decade of her life, her education has been designed to equip her for the role of Queen and Empress. Even the British cabinet considered the matter of her preparation.

The Duchess of York, when Elizabeth barely was above the toddling stage, pressed the little girl to be first to a private school where she might mingle with other girls of her age.

The Duchess was awarded French, literature, piano, drawing, writing and arithmetic, for which she expressed a dislike, have been taught her. Sometimes she has frowned on the restraint of conventional education.

Queen Teacher

Queen Mary, her grandmother, undertook to teach her etiquette and diplomatic convention.

Once Elizabeth attempted, on the story goes, to make use of public favor in her own advantage, only to be given a lesson in behavior to Queen Mary, with whom she was attending the library.

The imperious little miss insisted on standing and was admonished to sit down on pain of being sent home.

"I can't be sent home," was the princess' retort. "Think of all the people outside waiting to see me."

Another time she attempted to trade on her high birth, and told her to do something else and not want to do it, when the nurse insisted, Elizabeth froze her with the reminder:

"Royalty speaking"

"Royalty speaking," she said.

For driving an automobile under the influence of alcohol, he paid $100. For driving on a highway he paid $20. For driving without a license, $25.

All charges were out of an accident last July, in which the Mackay machine crashed into a car driven by Ralph Collins of Roxbury.

The doctor had appealed the first two counts and was found guilty on a jury. He had pleaded guilty to the third. Later, a sentence had totaled $425 in fines and had two weeks in jail.

Scores Injured On icy Roads

Worcester, Dec. 10.—Scores were injured, one man seriously, today as one of the worst ice storms in recent years gripped the city and most of central Massachusetts.

Charles Hyatt, 90, of Roxbury, was critically injured when two trucks skidded and collided on the southwest corner of the intersection of St. Vincent's Hospital, suffering from head injuries.

Bank Pays 35,000 Depositors

Under the terms of the gift of $1,090,755, the bank paid 35,000 depositors.

Payment of a five per cent dividend began at the bank today, after completion of the Currency J. F. O'Connor authorized the payment in Washington, and and the dividend was sent to depositors on the order of Frederick B. Durrant, treasurer of the bank.

ALL NOTICED
Nearly 300 notices were placed in the mail last night and the same amount will be mailed every day for the next five days, until the $1,090,755 have been paid and paid.

One of the first depositors to appear at the bank this morning was Mrs. Maria, Cardano, of 34 Boston street, East Boston. Mrs. Cardano told reporters:

"The Christmas of the last few years haven't been very merry ones. I had nearly all my money in the bank when it closed. This money comes just in time for me to do some Christmas shopping."

UNAWARE OF ACTION
Few of the depositors appeared to know their dividends on the first payment day, however, most of them unaware of it until they received notices by the mail.

HUB BRIDE TELLS OF DANCE WITH WALES

INCIDENT OF EDWARD'S VISIT

"Max I cut in, please," he asked politely, the cynosure of hundreds of eyes.

The pretty, blonde, eight-year-old youngster turning from the arms of her daddy into those of King Edward VIII, then the Prince of Wales.

And in the time of "Lamorne Blues" they danced around the spinning, brilliantly-lit ballroom of the Gavelly estate of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lawrence at Tuxford.

King Edward, then Prince of Wales, and the young daughter of his host, Isabel Lawrence.

Less than half-hour before, on that night of October 23, 1924, the child had been lying awake in her bed above the ballroom, several hours after her customary bedtime.

The door opened and the King's foot, her daddy, slipped into the room, tapped the child on the shoulder and seeing she was awake, asked:

"Would you like to see the Prince, dear?" he asked.

Her heart fluttered. A few minutes later, dressed in a light blue embroidered dress, she came downstairs for her first dance in honor of the King's visit.

KING'S ABDICATION MESSAGE READ TO COMMONS

Abdicated

(From International News Photograph Service)
King Edward VIII, Quit Throne for Love

MORGANATIC DEFINED

From German; Bans Succession

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Morganatic marriage, the term that the British royalists have derived from the German word "morganatisch," meaning "without dowry."

Though quite common in continental Europe among the reigning houses, morganatic marriage is virtually unknown in England. It is sometimes called a "left-handed marriage" because the left hand is given in the ceremony instead of the customary right hand.

The Latin expression in "morganatic" or "morganatic" marriage is "morganaticum," from "morgano," meaning "to deprive of rights."

Under its provisions, children born of the union have no right of succession to the dignity, title or estate of the parent or of the parent's property. The marriage, however, is recognized as fully binding by the Church, the children are legitimate and no other marriage can take place during the lifetime of the contracting parties—without a divorce.

EDWARD QUILTS WITH GREAT SADNESS, BUT RELIEF

bill will be introduced. It will be debated and probably passed tomorrow.

VAST CROWDS JAM STREETS

The Duke of York will be formally proclaimed King and Emperor of Great Britain Saturday afternoon.

The accession council will meet Saturday morning for the official ceremonies, and the proclamation throughout the empire will follow.

It was understood the Duke had not yet decided what title to take, but it was considered likely in high quarters he would be proclaimed king as George VI, rather than as Albert I.

Dramatic highlights in the historic Commons' session included the reading of Edward's abdication message, followed shortly by Premier Baldwin's address in which he revealed his secret conversations with the King.

Vast crowds jammed Parliament Square and hundreds of police were called. Mounted police rode on the sidewalks in efforts to keep the crowds moving.

Police manned all stations in the Hendon Airdrome area, a move always taken when King Edward intends to fly. Edward's plane was then tuned up.

In simple words of utmost sincerity, which tried without success to cloak his own deep feelings when he inscribed "Edward R. I." at the bottom of the parchment page, King Edward reluctantly sacrificed the country he loves for the woman he loves even more.

QUITS BRITAIN FOREVER

This solemn instrument of abdication did not in itself pledge Edward to a life of future exile from the soil of the British Empire.

But he was understood to have told his mother and other members of his family that with Mrs. Simpson he would live in foreign climes, that in behalf of the "stability" of the empire, which he treasured until the last, he would never set foot in Britain again.

Having renounced all his titles along with his privileges and prerogatives, Edward VIII will leave England tomorrow night as plain "Mr. Windsor." It is considered probable his successor on the throne, however, will confer a dukedom upon him.

The House of Lords will swear oath of allegiance to the Duke as new sovereign Saturday afternoon and his coronation, according to present indications, will take place on May 12, 1937, the date originally set for the coronation of King Edward.

The conflict between love and duty which for the past few days has torn the empire as it never has been torn before rang through the lines of Edward's abdication—a renunciation of throne and crown and sceptre and orb of majesty rather than sacrifice of the woman who has his heart.

"But my mind is made up," he said. "I declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and my descendants."

"I take my leave." At the beginning of his message, the King declared: "After long and anxious consideration, I am determined to renounce the throne to which I succeeded on the death of my father and I am now communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision."

KING'S BURDEN TOO HEAVY

"I will not enter into my private feelings but I beg it should be remembered that the burden which constantly rests on the shoulders of a sovereign is so heavy that it can only be borne in circumstances different from those in which I now find myself."

"Realizing as I do, the gravity of this step I can only hope for the understanding of my peoples in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it."

"I conceive I am not overlooking the public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency or satisfaction to myself."

Baldwin unexpectedly moved immediate consideration of the message. It had been anticipated the House would adjourn for a few hours after hearing it before commencing discussion.

Baldwin immediately sought to put at rest charges in the press and elsewhere his government had "smuggled" Edward off the throne.

"The King," he said, "has never shown any signs of offense or been hurt at anything I have said to him." "The King," Baldwin continued, "said to me not once but many times during the many hours we were together, especially toward the end: "You and I must settle this matter together. I will not have anyone interfering."

"Gravest Message"

Baldwin's wife trembled with emotion as he spoke these words and moved immediate consideration of the King's message.

In moving consideration of the abdication instrument, Baldwin said:

"No more grave message has ever been received by Parliament. On November 11, the Premier said he told King Edward that the union he contemplated with Mrs. Simpson would be considered by the people."

"I got that," Baldwin said. "This particular marriage was one which would receive approval of the country."

Baldwin said he told the King the position of a king's wife was different from the position of the wife of any other citizen in the country.

"It was part of the price a king has to pay," Baldwin said. "In his preparations, according to Baldwin, the King said, 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson and I am prepared to pay'."

VAST CROWDS IN STREETS; ARMY OF POLICE THERE

on the ground floor of Fort Belvedere. With accession of the Duke of York, and his wife as Queen Consort, Queen Mary will be known as the queen mother.

Near Hysteria

The House was packed to its fullest capacity by the time the speaker mounted the rostrum at 2:45 p. m. (19:45 E.R.T.) to call the members to order.

Dignified parliamentarians agitated in the aisles with scarcely enough room to move. The speaker's bench where cabinet ministers sat was equally crowded, with every prominent member of the government on hand.

The diplomatic gallery likewise was filled and the spacious public gallery was a solid mass of privileged spectators.

In the lobby of the House it was believed Commons would suspend its sitting for a few hours immediately after the King's message was read tomorrow, later to pass the necessary abdication bill.

As the session got under way with the usual preliminaries of routine business, the excited, breathless atmosphere of the House frequently made it impossible for members to hear the government's reply to their questions.

The tension, probably unprecedented in the history of the House, manifested by bursts of almost hysterical laughter at the slightest provocation during question time. The atmosphere was electric.

This final scene in the brief, crowned reign of Britain's King Edward VIII, played out beneath the light from the chamber's high windows, had begun at 11 o'clock, but of whatever late afternoon hours it might have lasted, it had been filtered through the night.

Early good humor changed to impatience over Minister Labor Ernest Brown's labored stoniness in answering questions. As a result, six queries—strange political questions—were asked in ten minutes in answer.

Members became increasingly impatient over Brown's long-winded replies. Opposition Laborers joined decisively and Conservative leaders finally shouted for order.

The end of it was that Brown lost his nerve and sat down. That was the end of the session, but the situation by suggesting publicly that Brown was a little grumpy, anyway.

Police Called

Means of mounting and foot police reinforcements were rushed to the vicinity of the House of Commons when huge throngs gathered outside the Parliament buildings.

On several occasions, mounted police were compelled to ride on the sidewalks to disperse the growing crowds. Traffic was blocked for a distance of half a mile from Parliament square.

British Ambassador to Berlin, Lord Runciman, was among the diplomats present in Commons, while other countries represented were Belgium, Turkey, Argentina, France, Portugal, Poland, Norway, Peru, Austria, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia, Latvia and Czechoslovakia.

In the distinguished strangers' gallery were members of the various royal households, including Sir John Dill, secretary to the Duke of York, Lord Claude Hamilton, Captain Lord Brooks and Sir Malcolm Murray.

Prime Minister Baldwin entered the House at 3:30 p. m. and was greeted by loud cheering.

It was understood King Edward's most intimate advisers have pointed out desirability of a personal visit to the Duke of York, but he has not yet made a formal statement to Parliament.

Queen's Farewell

At a touching farewell family conference with his mother, Queen Mary, and his three brothers—the Duke of York, Gloucester, and Kent—Edward made known his final decision.

His mother, Queen Mary, was overcome with sorrow as she tearfully listened to her eldest son's plan, steady words telling her he had finally chosen love in preference to royal duty, and that she was his mother.

But the Duke's final decision was not in doubt. He had chosen love over duty, and he was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it. He was determined to stick to it.

CHAPTER II

Mrs. Earl Winfield Spencer, in Washington while her husband was in China, was a model of discretion and self-denial, and her greatest pleasure was her real friendship with Dorothy McNamee.

When she came back to Washington later, after her divorce, things were different. I don't think the whirlwind excitement that followed her name then was her fault.

Here's another exclusive: hitherto unpublished picture, taken from the private album of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. It shows her at the age of 16.

TEXT OF KING EDWARD'S ABDICATION MESSAGE

this tenth day of December, 1936, in the presence of witnesses whose signatures are subscribed:

(Signed) "EDWARD, R. I."

"My execution of this instrument has been witnessed by my three brothers, their Royal Highnesses the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent. I deeply appreciate the spirit which has actuated the appeals which have been made to me to take a different decision and I have before reaching my final determination most fully pondered over them.

"But my mind is made up. Moreover further delay cannot but be most injurious to the peoples whom I have tried to serve as Prince of Wales and as King and whose future happiness and prosperity are the constant wish of my heart.

"I take my leave of them in the confident hope that the course which I have thought it right to follow is that which is best for the stability of the throne and empire and happiness of my people.

"I am deeply sensible of the consideration which they have always extended to me both before and after my accession to the throne and which I know they will extend in full measure to my successor.

"I am most anxious that there should be no delay of any kind in giving effect to the instrument which I have executed and that all necessary steps should be taken immediately to secure that my lawful successor, my brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of York, should ascend to the throne."

BRIDAL GOWN SHROUDS GIRL AS KILLER'S MIND IS TESTED

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 10 (INS).—The white satin dress she was to have worn at her wedding to a dashing army officer Saturday became a funeral shroud today for Elizabeth Giltner, 25-year-old daughter of a Michigan State College professor, as a sanity commission explored the mind of her slayer, Hope Morgan, 25.

Morgan was arrested Saturday night after a chase through the streets of Lansing. She was found in a rooming house, and the police found the dress she was to have worn at her wedding.

Hockey Today, Yesterday

Adams Gets Credit For Big Boom In Hockey

By ART ROSS

As Told to Bill Gimes

In the previous chapters of "Hockey—Today and Yesterday," I've dwelt almost exclusively on the boom and thunder angles of the game.

So, I think it appropriate to all you and in order to allow temps to cool, take a look at some of the "other" angles of the game.

Now, although you cannot get away from the fact that many Canadian squads of players to insert hockey into a more sport and less of a business, and despite the fact that most of them are Canadian, and in the dark, hoping against hope to stumble upon their elusive, C. I. Adams, former president of the Bruins, was responsible for the game going over the top.

$200,000 Deal Put Through

Americans were not well enough versed in the game to see their way clear to offer financial support. With the exception of Boston, Cleveland, New York and Detroit, hockey was a new indoor sport. Although the game had been played in the Smoky City for more than a quarter of a century, there wasn't a sport's promoter in Pittsburgh with enough confidence in hockey to back what is now one of the outstanding sports.

"Sugar Daddy" to Club

One of the "C. I." list acts upon entering the professional game was to cut the strings on his purse. I'd been in the game for many years prior to coming here as manager-coach of the Bruins, but I'd never been connected with or even heard of a promoter who was as anxious and ready at all times to dig into his pants in order to give a community the best talent money could buy.

Tomorrow, I'll endeavor to show you the struggle that old-time promoters experienced while trying to sell hockey to the sports public.

ADVENTURES IN BOSTON'S TOYLAND

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
BOSTON MASS
ANN MARSTERS VISITS BABY DOLL LAND SEE STORY ON PAGE 2, THIS SECTION

"Is There A Santa Claus?"

AN ANSWER TO A LITTLE GIRL'S LETTER:

"YES, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginians. There would be no child-like faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might set your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor man can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

LITTLE VIRGINIA O'HANLON,

eight years of age and perplexed by this question, put it up to the editor of the New York Sun in 1897. The following editorial classic from the pen of Francis P. Church answered the question for all time:

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, or even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

City of Death

Lynn Woman's Story of Town Crash to Earth in Great Disaster

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

All during the World War, ANITA JOHNSON of 61 JOHNSON STREET, LYNN, expected to be blown up by a bomb. In those days she lived in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

FLOYD GIBBONS

At night, no lights were allowed to face the harbor. The harbor was patrolled by boats day and night.

Anita was just a kid then. She didn't know what all those precautions were for, exactly. But she sort of understood that one day the German airplanes would come flying over the Atlantic and start showering bombs on the city.

But during even remotely resembling an air raid happened in Halifax until December 6, 1917. Then something happened that was worse than a hundred air raids.

You remember what happened then. You remember how two ships collided in the harbor—how one of them was loaded to the gunwales with ammunition that exploded and almost wrecked the whole town.

The great Halifax Explosion was one of the saddest disasters of the century. And Anita White was right where the big blast did some of the worst damage.

Anita was five years old when it happened, and she was in school when the big French munitions ship let go with a roar that was heard round the world.

Here's how Anita describes the terrible damage that followed. "We had just been in our class room for five minutes," she says, "when suddenly we heard a series of noises. I remember looking toward a window and thinking that a car must have backed outside. But it didn't take long to find out that it was no car."

What Anita had heard were not a couple of little explosions that set off the fire. The real thing didn't sound like an explosion to her at all.

Anita may have thought those sounds were the beginning of a car, but her teacher wasn't fooled. She seemed to know what was coming and told the children, "Put your heads down, in your desks!"

Those kids did as they were told. "Then it came!" Not a loud report. "Those kids were like me if I hear the least," she says. "When suddenly we heard a series of noises. I remember looking toward a window and thinking that a car must have backed outside. But it didn't take long to find out that it was no car."

Well, suppose we let her tell you herself how it felt. "At that age," she says, "my mind was, of course, full of war. I had my own ideas about air raids, so, as my head lay on the desk, my eyes tightly closed, I felt myself traveling skyward as I expected a bomb about to explode."

"I kept traveling up and up until it seemed there must be something wrong with my means of transportation."

"After all, a bomb could only send me so far, and I should be coming back by now. I was positive I would be killed when I landed, and I could see no reason to protest the agony, so I decided to investigate."

"I opened my eyes and saw the floor. Now that floor wasn't supposed to have followed me, so I realized that I wasn't up in the air at all."

"I hadn't even moved, and I couldn't move. There were so many things on top of me. I heard some yelling and I yelled too. But that didn't help any, so I waited."

Anita doesn't know how long she waited. "Time didn't mean a thing to her," she was so scared by the thought that she didn't feel any time.

A week or two later that she even realized she was hurt. But she sat at her desk until some students came into the room and pulled her out of it.

"Fortunately I was able to walk," she says. "There were only five or six of us who could."

Then Anita started making her way out of the school building. "We managed to climb and crawl over things that blocked the halls," she says. "The stairs were all gone but there was enough debris piled up where they had been to take their place. We slid and crawled down those stairs and finally got outside."

"I stayed there at the school for quite a while, too, scared to do anything else. All I could see around me was fire. The soldiers kept bringing other girls out of the school building."

"Some of them were dead. Others were so injured that they couldn't be recognized. Other buildings were down all around us."

"It didn't take long to find out what had happened. After I had been there for ten or fifteen minutes I saw my sister coming out."

Anita wanted to fly faster to come up. But other children came up too. "Anita didn't go on past her and didn't even notice me."

Anita didn't fly and she didn't come back. And only they did. Anita knew that that day had been the most terrible of her life. After several days she had been injured.

Her face, her clothing, her whole body, all of them were covered with blood.

Together, she and sister started for home. They walked through wreckage, dodged the flames, were and stopped over and over by the smoke. And when they arrived at their home they found it just another wreck like the others and all the other buildings in the neighborhood.

Anita's head was full of lots of glass, but she managed to have it all taken out except for one piece which she says she thinks the doctor left there for a souvenir.

She has a few faint scars, too, but there's nothing in what she might have had.

"And," she says, "I have still to find out what it feels like to be blown up in the air by a bomb."

Well, if I hope Anita never does learn what it feels like to be blown up by a bomb. But I'll know how to a few kids that have been blown up by a bomb. Now for someone else who needs a good representative advertisement.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Charles H. Willey of Concord, N. H., won one hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of the page.
